

Southeast Asia Mining Summit 2013

31 January - 1 February, 2013, Jakarta, Indonesia

Expanding mining operations through investment and technology

Currently mining in South East Asia is expanding very rapidly. With India, China and South East Asia continually expanding, their countries need coal to power their expanding middle classes, copper to build telecommunications and iron to erect the skyscrapers. Gold, also mined in South East Asia is growing increasingly interesting for international investors as the price has increased exponentially globally. Due to the limited amount of commodities available and the growing demands from China, India and South East Asia, mining will continue to thrive in the region.

Southeast Asia Mining Summit 2013 will host regulators, mining companies, global investors, financiers & strategic service providers to discuss regulatory policies, mineral prospective, investment partnerships, financing and investment opportunities across Southeast Asia.
